After her schooling, she went to work at local farms and later at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. During the war years, she met Tony Schimnosky and they were married on December 29, 1942 in Ladner, BC. While Tony was stationed there, Rose worked at Burns Ranch. After the war, they moved to Carmel, SK, where they lived for two years. In 1947, they moved to Toronto, ON where Rose worked as a housekeeper for A.M. Ramsay. In 1950, Tony and Rose returned to Saskatchewan and lived in various communities including Sanctuary, Conquest, Cupar and Elrose where they owned and operated grocery stores for which Rose kept the books. As well, they spent a year in Saskatoon where Tony sold real estate. In 1975, Tony and Rose settled in Humboldt where Rose continued to do the bookwork, this time for Tony's piano tuning business.
